Adding External Content Solar Weather

Using External code in your website

Many external sites have HTML code that you can put on your site to display information that they publish.

Ustream and LiveStream are examples of this type of content. These type of sites offer either free or paid service options.

This website offers solar weather and propagation displays that your site can use. (They do request a donation for their service).

www.hamqsl.com/solar.html

External sites have some drawbacks. You cannot control the content that they provide, and they can change without notice.
